The role of the monitoring trustee

To that end, it will namely be required:

- To hold discussions with Google without delay, each time that the monitoring trustee has any doubts regarding Google's compliance with the commitments
- To inform the Autorité de la concurrence, without delay, in the event that Google fails to comply with the commitments
- To provide, if requested by the Autorité, any explanation concerning Google's compliance with the commitments
- To provide the Autorité de la concurrence with a quarterly monitoring report concerning compliance with the commitments.

Related rights: a review of the principal stages

As a reminder, in April 2020, the Autorité issued injunctions in the context of (urgent) interim measures against Google (Decision 20-MC-01 of 9 April 2020/see press release), pending the decision on the merits. It then enjoined the company to negotiate in good faith with press agencies and publishers for the remuneration due for the use of their protected content (inclusion of press photos and articles on the Google Search engine and its Google News and Discover services). In July 2021, it was then led to impose a penalty of 500 million euros upon Google for non-compliance with these injunctions (Decision 21-D-17 of 12 July 2021/see press release), enjoining Google to comply with its decision on (urgent) interim measures, subject to a periodic penalty payment.

In the course of the investigation into the merits of this case, competition concerns were identified and formalised in a preliminary assessment. Following the communication of this assessment, Google proposed a first set of commitments in December 2021, which were subjected to a market test (see press release of 15 December 2021). Following a hearing in April 2022 before the Board, Google successively sent four new versions of these commitments as well as a final proposal on 9 May 2022, in order to address both the concerns expressed in the market test and those of the Board.

Then, in the Decision of 21 June 2022, the Autorité considered that the commitments proposed by Google would likely put an end to the competition concerns expressed and would be substantial, credible and verifiable. It therefore decided to accept them and make them mandatory.
