Official Launch Date and Release Schedule

The iPhone 17 lineup was introduced by Apple on September 9, 2025 at a special media event.

According to multiple sources, pre-orders for the new iPhone 17 series opened on Friday, September 12, 2025 — with general retail availability beginning Friday, September 19, 2025.

This follows Apple's familiar release rhythm: unveil early September, pre-order later that week, and start deliveries/in-store sales about 1-2 weeks later.

Which Models Were Released in 2025

For 2025, Apple expanded the iPhone 17 series beyond just a single model. The lineup includes:

- The standard — base model for general users.

Why The Timing Makes Sense (Apple's Release Pattern)

Apple has long followed a fairly consistent annual cycle: new iPhone models are typically unveiled in early-to-mid September, with shipping and retail availability following within one to two weeks.

In 2025 the pattern held — the September 9 announcement, followed by pre-orders on September 12 and retail availability on September 19 — allowing Apple to coordinate global markets and ensure supply chain readiness across many regions.

What This Means for Buyers (Now and Going Forward)

Because iPhone 17 is already on the market, potential buyers now have several advantages:

- You can choose from a variety of models (standard, Air, Pro, Pro Max) depending on needs — from everyday use to pro-level photography and performance.
- Given that new iPhones are released yearly, devices from previous generations (like iPhone 16 or earlier) may see price drops — making them a better value if you don't need top-end features.

- If you waited for iPhone 17 — now's the time to buy. The typical pre-order wait and launch day uncertainties are over, and the phones should be widely available in many regions.

At the same time, buyers in some markets should be prepared for possible delays or limited stock, since Apple often phases rollouts depending on region and demand.
