Why Do Prices Differ Across European Countries?

The variation in pricing across Europe can be attributed to several factors:

For example, if the Euro strengthens or weakens against other currencies like the British Pound, the price of the iPhone in those regions may increase or decrease accordingly.
- Regional Pricing Strategies: Apple may also set prices based on local market conditions, including competition and purchasing power. For instance, in some countries where Apple faces more competition from Android devices, the price may be slightly lower to stay competitive.
