You can purchase it directly through the official Apple online store, or from authorized retailers and resellers such as local “Apple Premium Resellers” and official distributors. Several major retailers already list the model with the same pricing as Apple’s official store.

They are designed to match different user needs and budgets: from those who mainly use the phone for everyday tasks up to heavy-use cases like 4K video recording, large photo libraries, or extended offline storage.

Choosing a higher-capacity model (1 TB or even 2 TB) offers long-term flexibility, especially if you tend to keep your device for several years. On the other hand, the 256 GB base model remains a sensible choice for users who rely mostly on cloud storage or don't store extensive media on the device itself.

Things to Keep in Mind Before Buying in the Philippines

While the official price list gives a good baseline, prospective buyers should be aware of a few practical considerations:

- Stock availability may vary by retailer and region. Some variants (especially higher-storage ones like 2 TB) may sell out first or have limited availability in certain stores outside Metro Manila. It's wise to check online stock or contact a local reseller before planning a purchase.
- Price promotions or discounts can occur. Depending on the retailer or time of year (holiday promos, bank installment deals, trade-in offers), you might find slightly lower prices or bundled perks. Always compare offers among authorized sellers.
- Language of warranty and service centers. Buying from official or authorized stores ensures you retain warranty eligibility and access to genuine repair or support services in the Philippines. Grey-market imports or unofficial sellers could compromise that.
